I use this series for homeschooling my sons who are 10 & 13 (5th & 8th grades) and find it is appropriate for both grade levels. Obviously, you could supplement these books with other materials to suit the needs of older or younger children as well. (I enjoy history, so I do these lessons with my kids and can tailor it to their needs. if your child is working independently, it will likely be too much for a younger child.) I like the way each lesson is set up (as far as quantity of information to read and length/content of the worksheets that follow each lesson). The worksheets at the end of each lesson have a variety of matching, multiple choice, short answer, and maps/diagrams depending on lesson content. As I mentioned, we like this series as a whole and I find that all of the books I have purchased are of similar quality.

My 11 and 12 year old kids enjoy this so much more than boring text books. It's enough information to get their attention, not so much that they are bored to tears.

Great to use when teaching on the subject

This book worked great for my 6th grade social studies classes. I highly recommend this book to any teacher or parent. It has great information and a quiz on each article.

I bought these (Medieval Times and World Civilizations) as a birthday present for a 9 year old grandson who enjoys history. However, I had them sent to him and when I arrived for a visit, I found that the only thing interesting about them was the front cover. The entire booklet was more of a workbook style, not many pictures or descriptives, all in black and white. Although my grandson was gracious with his thank yous, it was a gift that was set aside. Now, I need to look for a companion text

Good series of material to use in a Middle School or High School.
