Diana Fisher is a widely published illustrator whose artwork has won her a scholarship, as well as several scholastic and advertising awards. She studied fine art in New York and computer graphics in Arizona. Before concentrating on illustrating, Diana was an art teacher to children with special needs, a graphic designer, and a portrait artist. A lifelong interest in art has compelled Diana to explore such diverse art forms as jewelry and clothing design. She is known for her expert airbrushing, and she paints in a variety of different media, including oil, watercolor, and acrylic. Diana's studio is based in the southwest, where she draws inspiration from the magnificent desert landscapes and wildlife. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

Nice little book. I will be referencing it for help with my projects.

It is easy to understand. The writing is easy to read and follow. It contains several patterns which are easy to redraw on rocks. The book size is convenient, the lettering to read and the color photographs were appreciated.

Great addition to my Library

Simple and easy to use. Enjoyed using the ideas with my own rocks.

Thank you. When I returned to the store where I had just purchased one as a gift, they gleefully stated, "O' that was our last one!" Thank God someone out there is listening!

Not sure why I am being asked to write a 2nd review when I already wrote one..but to repeat this book is GREAT and the directions are super and simple and the projects come out looking like they are suppose to...

love crafts & new ideas- thanks

This is my favorite book for rock painting. It takes you from A to Z. How to begin at the begin and end up with a nicely painted rock by beginners. The best book I own on painting. Thanks.
