If you are looking for a great bible study to do by yourself, with a friend, or with a loved one, this is it! I assure you that it will inspire you to live a Christian life. I have ordered this devotional several times to give to friends and family. I highly recommend if you want a good study using one topic a day. This is really experiencing God day by day. Both Blackaby's are excellent theologians who explain the Biblical topics in an easy to understand every day language.

For me, this material would be better in the Blackaby workbook, not a journal. Also, writing on the lines provided is inhibited by the binding of the book itself, so I'm not comfortable with the writing space provided. In any case, I use it only as often as I remember, but am still treating it as I would any other pocket devotional and journal; yet, it is not like this. It is actually a means of documenting how and when you are experiencing God. Maybe, I will try that approach and see if it relates to the subject of the day and Biblical quote to the right of the lines. I went ahead and read the passage which I applied to a current problem presenting itself in my life the passage on that day presented. I suddenly found it meaningful to my current situation and believe God will persevere providing me direction on this issue. Amazing. God sent my dog to take him out to do his "duty", While returning, I encountered persons knowing something about this current situation, thus giving me needed direction. The Bible did not say anything except asking Saul to go talk to someone who has the answers...ahh. Well, maybe I can learn to use this book after all!

bought this book used, dirt cheap. it's just like new, except on the back of the front book cover someone wrote a note on it. i love this book. i had bought it before, but a friend liked it so i gave it to her. so i bought another one for me. it's very well-written and very positive and there are lines where you can write your own notes about what you read. i read one of the pages to my uncle, who was just diagnosed with cancer, and it made him and me cry. very uplifting book, very touching. i highly recommend it. :)

I wanted a nice daily thought journal. I don't like the back cover picture (if it's supposed to be God) because it's too stereotypical and I feel it excludes people who don't agree with that image of God. Hopefully it's Noah or Moses or something. The daily scripture and commentary is great and gets me thinking and is always relatable, and not at all didactic or condescending.

Excellent devotional, so excited to use it with our study. Great deal from this seller also.

I've started reading this devotional. There is a page and subject for each day. The format is a short scripture verse and topic of the day. Then the author gives some background information and then asks the kind of searching questions of the reader that either call for introspection and/or change. There is blank space at the side of each reading to jot notes. The author suggests that this is a book to keep & use repeatedly as a sort of diary of spiritual growth over a lifetime.

Each morning at 6 am I look forward to going into my study to commune with God. The title of the devotion is always intriguing. I then read the scripture verse under the title and then go to my Bible to read the full context. I then read the devotional which gives thoughtful commentary on the scripture reading. I write down my thoughts and impressions in the place provided in the book. I then re read the scripture passage in my Bible slowly until a phrase or word catches my attention. I chew the phrase carefully, drawing the goodness out of it. I pray about the thoughts and feelings that have surfaced and write them in the journal section of the page. I rest in silence for a while, focusing on the Biblical phrase or sentence, listening and keeping my mind on God. I carry this process on as I read again the devotional. This book is a tool that will usher you directly into God's presence. Do not miss the opportunity to use this tool to truly Experience God.

This is my Rock that I rely upon each morning to reset the sail, clean the lenses and reaffirm my faith in God. It is an incredibly inspiring, motivating and revealing glimpse into our eternal life, salvation and future. It transcends words into comprehension, insight and dare I say, wisdom. It wets your appetite for the Bible and becoming a humble and willing servant of Jesus Christ.
