

The book was found

From The Kitchen To The Parlor: Language And Becoming In African American Women's Hair Care (Studies In Language, Gender, And Sexuality)

Synopsis

When is hair "just hair" and when is it not "just hair"? Documenting the politics of African American women's hair, this multi-sited linguistic ethnography explores everyday interaction in beauty parlors, Internet discussions, comedy clubs, and other contexts to illuminate how and why hair matters in African American women's day-to-day experiences.

Book Information

Series: Studies in Language, Gender, and Sexuality

Paperback: 200 pages

Publisher: Oxford University Press; 1 edition (April 20, 2006)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0195304160

ISBN-13: 978-0195304169

Product Dimensions: 9.1 x 0.6 x 6.1 inches

Shipping Weight: 13 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 3.6 out of 5 stars 3 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #324,163 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #6 in Books > Health, Fitness & Dieting > Beauty, Grooming, & Style > Hair #880 in Books > Textbooks > Humanities > Linguistics #1357 in Books > Arts & Photography > History & Criticism > Criticism

Customer Reviews

"This work is not only deeply original but it is also brave: Jacobs-Huey has tackled a range of issues that are highly charged, both in the arena of racial politics and, even trickier for her, in negotiating her own place in multiple communities of practice. That she so successfully balances the scholarly, the political, and the personal is testament to her rare combination of considerable analytic talent with keen political and emotional intelligence."--Sally McConnell-Ginet, Department of Linguistics, Cornell University, co-author of Language and Gender"Dr. Jacobs-Huey's research on the symbolic and moral meanings of hair in African American communities invigorates the analysis of the linguistic and social construction of personal and group identity. Jacobs-Huey demonstrates that 'hair is not just hair' in the eyes of African Americans, a social fact that, she argues, evidences a wide gulf between European American and African American women. Jacobs-Huey examines how the racial divide is invisible to Euro American women but blatantly obvious to African American women. Jacobs-Huey's study is the first to document how hair is represented in everyday African American verbal interactions across culturally potent settings related to the management of hair.

These settings include hair salons, cosmetology training institutes, and, fascinatingly, stand-up comedy."--Elinor Ochs, Department of Anthropology, UCLA, 1998 MacArthur Fellow

"The topic of this book is of great interest to me and other (African American) women for the very reasons Jacobs-Huey explains: Sometimes hair is just hair and sometimes hair is not just hair. In the African American community, hair can be a very touchy, private, painful, prideful, celebratory, 'burning' thing. It is to be approached with caution. Jacobs-Huey does that in this book, and she also tells us about the many meanings, nuances and travails, of hair and its meanings among African American women."--Sonja Lanehart, Department of English, University of Georgia, author of Sista, Speak!: Black Women Kinfolk Talk about Language and Literacy

Linguistic anthropologist Lanita Jacobs-Huey is staking her claim as the Zora Neale Hurston of African American hair care research, immersing herself as participant observer in the culture of Black cosmetology. Combining childhood experiences as a cosmetologist's daughter with training as a keen-eyed scholar, she deciphers the emotionally nuanced, politically charged language of hair and its often contradictory interpretations in the Black community. From Internet chat rooms to hair weaving seminars, she searches the complex continuum between 'kitchen beauticians' and 'hair doctors,' all the while delving into the mix of science, religion, health, and beauty that creates the underpinnings for verbal and non-verbal negotiations about hair among African American women."--A'Lelia Bundles, Author, On Her Own Ground: The Life and Times of Madam C. J. Walker

Lanita Jacobs-Huey is Assistant Professor in the Department of Anthropology and co-affiliated with the Program in American Studies and Ethnicity at the University of Southern California.

This is an academic book, so the information presented is often dry and densely packed. However, I found that by reading it carefully, I felt I gained insights into the hair care world that I had only just suspected before. I guess it gave my hair-dresser paranoia a bit more fuel, but I found it enlightening at the same time. Though hair is just something that grows out of our head (if we are lucky, that is), it can often times be highly politically charged, especially for those of us of African descent. Jacobs-Huey delves mostly into the world of black hair dressers to study this interaction. She explores their world, and how they use language to take the care of black hair out of the hands of black women. They frequently do this through making their profession almost like a religion, complete with jargon that's used to exclude the "uninitiated". Though there has been much literature about hair, as well as the politics of black hair, Jacobs-Huey actually explores the conversations between white women, hair dressers of both races, and black women about hair care. She notes the meaning behind what at first glance appears to be simple conversations between women about hair, but upon analyzing them, she points out the politically loaded subtext within them. It becomes a sort of game loaded with meanings that often times one side is totally oblivious to. It also shows the dance between politeness, getting needs met, politics, racism, and self-expression women of different races and positions engage in around the topic of hair. Jacobs-Huey acts as documenter to the give and take conversations, revealing how women talk to each other about hair, rather than writing a one-sided political discourse on a particular philosophy of hair. I dropped out of letting professionals care for my hair a long time ago. So I found it fascinating to "infiltrate" (through Jacob-Huey's book) the world of black hair care professionals who believe that the care of a woman's hair should not be left to the novice. They use language to erect a barrier (rather than for true communication) so that the lay-person is excluded from understanding discussions about her own hair. This book illuminates the power struggle that goes on for who truly has control over a black woman's hair.

Textbook

I'll preface my review by saying that I am definitely not the intended audience for this book. I was forced to buy it when I took a class by the author, Lanita Jacobs-Huey, who is a professor at USC. Her class was called "Understanding Culture Through Film," which sounded interesting. As it turns out, she devoted almost the entire class to ranting about black women's hair. If you are the sort of person who thinks that studying the social implications of black women's hair is a worthy pursuit, then you should probably buy this book. For the rest of us, it's full of academic psychobabble and deliberately overcomplicated terms for simple, unoriginal ideas. She could easily make all her points in 10 pages, and even then, they wouldn't be very interesting. The main argument is that for black women, hair is more than "just hair," it's a vehicle for expression that is often highly charged with political implications (I'm sorry, but it's hard to even summarize this book without sounding like academic psychobabble). But wait - at other times, hair is "just hair"! She never really develops the point much further than that or provides any sort of explanation for why things are the way they are, but peppers the text with meaningless words like "problematize" and "intertextual" to stretch out the length and make herself sound smart. If you find this sort of self-important drivel as obnoxious as I do, then don't buy the book. And if you're buying this book because you're enrolled in any of her classes, drop the class immediately.

Download to continue reading...

From the Kitchen to the Parlor: Language and Becoming in African American Women's Hair Care (Studies in Language, Gender, and Sexuality) Hair Loss: Hair Loss Solutions for Beginners - Hair Loss Basic Guide - Hair Loss Cure (Hair Loss Protocol - Hair Loss Black Book - Hair Loss for Dummies 1) Hair Loss Prevention: #1 Hair Loss Prevention And Reversal Techniques, Methods, Treatments And Remedies (Hair Loss, Hair Loss Cure, Hair Loss In Women, ... Protocol, Hair Loss Black book, Baldness) 100 Tips For Hair Loss: How to Deal With Hair Loss and Assist Your Hair Growth (hair loss, hair growth, alopecia, grow hair, baldness, balding) Hair Loss Cure & Treatment: Prevention & Effective Natural Regrowth Methods (Hair Loss Prevention, Hair Loss Treatment, Hair Loss Cure, Hair Loss For Men, Hair Regrowth, Self Help) The Men's Hair Book: A Male's Guide To Hair Care, Hair Styles, Hair Grooming, Hair Products and Rocking It All Without The Baloney African: African Recipes - The Very Best African Cookbook (African recipes, African cookbook, African cook book, African recipe, African recipe book) Hair Styling Guide: Hair Care For African American And Bi-Racial Children: Quickly style, grow and maintain healthier more beautiful African American and Bi-racial hair in record time. Hair Loss: 5 Easy Steps To Stop and Prevent Hair Loss (hair loss, hair care, bald, beauty care, personal hygiene, natural health remedies, personal health care) The Curly Hair Handbook: Natural DIY Hair Care Secrets for Black Women (African American Hair Care) Hair Loss: How it Happens and How to Fix It (Hair Loss, beauty and fashion, hair, loss, aging parents, hair growth, healthy hair) Hair Loss Cure: Everything You Need to Know About Hair Loss, Hair Loss Prevention, Hair Re-growth and Hair Loss Treatments (Hairloss treatment) Hair Loss Explained - Natural Solutions for Hair Loss and Premature Balding: (Natural Hair Care, Hair Loss, Scalp Treatments, Balding, Cure, Going Bald, Remedies) From Drag Queens to Leathermen: Language, Gender, and Gay Male Subcultures (Studies in Language Gender and Sexuality) Hair Loss Solutions for Men: How to Cheat Hair Loss for Life (Hair Loss Solutions: How to Cheat Hair Loss for Life Book 1) Grow African American Hair Long - 7 Days To Faster Growing Hair: Grow Hair Fast Methods and Natural Treatments for Balding CAT CARE: BEGINNERS GUIDE TO KITTEN CARE AND TRAINING TIPS (Cat care, cat care books, cat care manual, cat care products, cat care kit, cat care supplies) Classic Hairstyles for Men - An Illustrated Guide To Men's Hair Style, Hair Care & Hair Products Homemade Natural Hair Care (with Essential Oils): DIY Recipes to Promote Hair Growth, Shine & Repair (Shampoo, Conditioner, Masks, Aromatherapy, Hair Loss Treatment - 100% Cruelty Free) Common Women: Prostitution and Sexuality in Medieval England (Studies in the History of Sexuality)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help